What Is Mahjong?

Mahjong is a four player tile based game that originated in China during the late 19th century. It blends skill, strategy, and a touch of luck. Each player competes to form a complete hand of 14 tiles, consisting of sets and a pair, by drawing and discarding tiles in a specific order.

While the core mechanics remain consistent, different regions have developed their own rulesets and scoring systems. Knowing the mahjong how to play beginnersfundamentals will let you adapt to any variation you encounter.

The Mahjong Tiles

Understanding the tile set is the first step. A standard Chinese mahjong set contains 144 tiles, divided into three categories:

- Suit Tiles (36 tiles each, 108 total)

  Dots (circles) – numbers 1 to 9
  - Bamboo (sticks) – numbers 1 to 9
  - Characters (numbers) – numbers 1 to 9
- Winds – East, South, West, North (four of each)
- Dragons – Red, Green, White (four of each)
- Flowers – one of each: Plum, Orchid, Bamboo, Chrysanthemum

- Seasons – Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter

Bonus tiles are special: when drawn, they're immediately replaced with a new tile, and points are awarded. They're not used in a standard winning hand, but they can boost your score.

Game Setup

Follow these steps to set up a typical Mahjong game:

1. Shuffle the tiles: Place all 144 tiles face down on the table and mix them thoroughly.
2. Build the wall: Each player builds a wall of 18 tiles (or 17, depending on the rule set) in two rows. The walls form a square.
3. Determine the dealer: Roll dice or use a random method. The dealer starts the first round.
4. Deal the tiles: Deal 13 tiles to each player, starting with the dealer and moving counter clockwise.
5. Draw the remaining tiles: The rest of the tiles form the draw pile, placed in the center.

Once the tiles are dealt, each player looks at their hand, places their tiles face down, and the game begins.

Basic Rules of Play

Mahjong is a game of cycles: drawing, discarding, and claiming. The goal is to form a complete hand of 14 tiles: four sets (melds) and a pair.

1. The Turn Sequence

1. Draw a tile: The player draws the top tile from the draw pile.
2. Check for a winning hand: If the new tile completes a legal hand, the player declares Mahjong and wins the round.
3. Discard a tile: If not winning, the player discards one tile to the center.

2. Meld Types

- Pung (Triplet): Three identical tiles.
- Kong (Quad): Four identical tiles. When a player declares a Kong, they draw an extra tile from the back of the wall.
- Chow (Sequence): Three consecutive suit tiles (e.g., 4 5 6 of Bamboo). Only available for the next player in turn.

3. Claiming Discards

After a player discards, the next player may claim the tile to complete a Pung or Chow. If multiple players want the same tile, the priority is:

- First, the player who would have played next (i.e., the one after the discarder).
- Second, the player who can declare a Kong.
- Third, the player who can declare a Pung.
- Fourth, the player who can declare a Chow (only if it's their turn).

4. Winning the Hand

A complete hand consists of:

- Four sets (melds) – each can be a Pung, Kong, or Chow.
- One pair – two identical tiles.

Special hands exist (e.g., all Pungs, all Chows, or mixed suits), but for beginners, aim for the basic structure.

Scoring Explained

Scoring varies by region, but most systems share common elements. Here's a simple framework:

- Basic points: Each Pung or Kong earns points (usually 2 or 4).
- Sequence points: Chows are worth fewer points.
- Bonus tiles: Each Flower or Season tile adds extra points.
- Special hands: Some combinations (e.g., all suits, pure straight) give bonus points.

In many Western adaptations, the dealer (East) gets a bonus for winning. The final score is calculated by adding all these points, then applying any multipliers.

Essential Strategies for Beginners

Even as a novice, you can improve your game with a few tactical approaches. Below are practical strategies to keep in mind during play:

1. Keep Your Hand Flexible

Try to keep a mix of tiles that could form multiple sets. Avoid locking yourself into a specific pattern too early; this gives you options as the game evolves.

2. Watch the Discards

Pay attention to what your opponents discard. If a player is discarding many Bamboo tiles, they're likely building a Bamboo hand. Avoid discarding tiles that would help them complete a set.

3. Manage Your Bonus Tiles

Flowers and Seasons can be drawn and replaced immediately. Use them strategically: if you're close to a winning hand, drawing a bonus tile may give you an extra point or two.

4. Practice the "Hold and Wait" Technique

Sometimes it's better to keep a tile in your hand that you're not ready to use, waiting for a more favorable draw. This "holding" can create a powerful pair or complete a set later.

5. Understand the Timing of Kongs

Declare a Kong only when it truly benefits your hand. A Kong gives you an extra tile, but it also exposes a set to other players.

Common Mistakes to Avoid

- Discarding too early: Players often discard tiles that would help opponents. Be mindful of the discard pile.
- Forgetting to check for a winning hand: After drawing, always check if you can win before discarding.
- Overlooking bonus tiles: Forgetting to replace a Flower or Season tile can cost you points.
- Ignoring the dealer's role: The dealer receives extra points when winning; use this to your advantage.
- Not adapting to rule variations: Mahjong has many rule sets. Make sure you understand the specific scoring system of the game you're playing.

Popular Variations Around the World

Mahjong's global appeal has led to diverse rule sets. Below are some common variations you may encounter:

1. Chinese Classical Mahjong

Uses a 144 tile set, with a focus on traditional scoring and complex hands. Best for players who enjoy depth and variety.

2. Hong Kong Mahjong

Similar to Chinese Classical but with slightly simplified rules and scoring. It's the most widely played version in Asia.

3. American Mahjong

Uses a 144 tile set but introduces a card deck that lists legal hands. Scoring is based on point values assigned to each hand.

4. Japanese Mahjong (Riichi)

Features a 136 tile set (no Flowers or Seasons), a hidden wall, and the "riichi" declaration. Scoring is more intricate and includes bonus points for specific patterns.

5. Korean Mahjong (Sangho)

Uses a 144 tile set, with unique scoring rules and a strong emphasis on strategy.
